Geppetto and Pinocchio lived happily ever after, with Pinocchio going to school and learning many new things. He made many friends and became a kind and honest person. The fairy would visit them from time to time, just to make sure that Pinocchio was still being good. Geppetto was grateful to the fairy for making his wish come true and for turning his wooden puppet into a real son. He would often tell Pinocchio how lucky he was to have such a kind and magical fairy in his life. Pinocchio never forgot his promise to the fairy, and he always told the truth, no matter what. He knew that lying would only cause him trouble and that it was better to be honest and sincere.

Geppetto and Pinocchio, the wooden puppet, led a blissful existence, with Pinocchio acquiring a formal education and imbibing many a novelty. He forged numerous friendships and evolved into a benevolent and truthful individual. The fairy, an ethereal being, would occasionally grace them with her presence, primarily to ensure Pinocchio's moral rectitude. Geppetto, the master craftsman, was beholden to the fairy for her benevolence in granting his wish and transforming his inanimate creation into a flesh-and-blood son. He would frequently remind Pinocchio of his felicity in having a compassionate and mystical fairy in his life. Pinocchio, in turn, remained steadfast to his covenant with the fairy, adhering to veracity at all times, cognizant of the fact that mendacity would only lead to tribulation and that candor and sincerity were preferable.

+Years passed, and Pinocchio grew up to be a fine young man. He became a carpenter like his father and made many beautiful wooden toys for the children in the village. He never forgot the lessons he had learned from the fairy and the adventures he had with Geppetto. In the end, Pinocchio became a wise and respected elder of the village, passing on his knowledge and wisdom to the next generation. And whenever he told the story of his transformation from a wooden puppet to a real boy, he always remembered to thank the fairy who had made it all possible.

❶ In a magical castle, Minhee, with her short curly hair and big eyes, was a smart detective.

❷ Susan, in a red dress and long straight hair, had a kind heart.

❸ Zombie, wearing old pants, added mystery to their world.

❹ Minhee discovered an old magic, linking Zombie's future to the castle's treasure. Zombie and Susan were childhood friends,

❺ With Minhee's help, as they shared memories, the curse broke, showing the hidden treasure—a box of precious things.

❻ Minhee, the detective, solved the mystery, bringing together unlikely friends. As the sun set, they knew love and friendship

Make a new passage with a different topic with a similar MCQ as follows: Which of the following best describes Jonas's change in emotion?

Looking out the bus window, Jonas could not stay calm. He had been looking forward to this field trip. It was the first field trip for his history course. His history professor had recommended it to the class, and Jonas had signed up enthusiastically. He was the first to board the bus in the morning. The landscape looked fascinating as the bus headed to Alsace. Finally arriving in Alsace after three hours on the road, however, Jonas saw nothing but endless agricultural fields. The fields were vast, but hardly appealed to him. He had expected to see some old castles and historical monuments, but now he saw nothing like that awaiting him. "What can I learn from these boring fields?" Jonas said to himself with a sigh.

Which of the following best describes Sarah's reaction to the news?

Sarah had been waiting anxiously for her exam results to be released. She had studied tirelessly for months and had even enrolled in an extra tutoring course. When the results were finally released, Sarah eagerly logged into her student portal. However, as she read through the results, her face fell. She had not done as well as she had hoped. Her grades were average, and she had barely passed some of her subjects. Sarah was devastated. She had expected to do better and had even envisioned receiving high marks. "What am I going to do now?" Sarah muttered to herself, feeling disheartened.

AntWordProfiler의 어휘 분석 결과

The theory of Utilitarianism, developed by Jeremy Bentham and John Stuart Mill, holds that the moral worth of an action is determined by its usefulness in promoting the overall happiness or well-being of all affected individuals. Utilitarianism posits that the moral goal is to maximize overall happiness and to minimize overall suffering. The theory of Utilitarianism is based on the principle of the "greatest happiness principle" which holds that actions are right in proportion as they tend to promote happiness, wrong as they tend to produce the reverse of happiness. Utilitarianism provides a quantitative approach to measure happiness, known as "utility" which can be determined by calculating the balance of pleasure over pain. One criticism of Utilitarianism is that it can lead to the violation of individual rights, by prioritizing the overall happiness of the majority over the rights of a minority. Another criticism is that it is difficult to measure and compare the happiness or well-being of different individuals, which can make it challenging to determine the moral worth of an action.

Although traditional beliefs may have some validity, they also have limitations, not the least of which is that they often contradict each other. For example, we hear that honesty is the best policy ("Honesty is the best policy") but also that it is sometimes better to be discreet ("Discretion is the better part of valor"). ① We are told that hard work pays off ("No pain, no gain") but also that working too hard is detrimental to one's health ("All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy"). ② Each of these conflicting beliefs may be true in certain circumstances, but without a clear understanding of when they apply and when they don't, they offer little guidance in navigating life's challenges. ③ That is why we often rely on these beliefs in moments of uncertainty. ④ However, they are even less useful in situations where we must make important decisions. ⑤ For example, when faced with a difficult choice, how do we decide between "The early bird catches the worm" and "Good things come to those who wait"?

Tone 수정(Informal > Formal) by ChatGPT

Obama 대통령 문체로 수정	It is a fundamental truth that heat, at its essence, is energy — a potent force that possesses the ability to initiate changes within any given system. It is important to note that in our world, every system within the global climate operates as an interconnected and interdependent entity. Thus, when we introduce additional heat energy into this delicate web of systems, it inevitably sets off a chain reaction, causing the global climate, as a whole, to undergo a transformation.
Trump 대통령 문체로 수정	Look, folks, let me tell you something — heat, it's energy, okay? And when you add that energy to any system, changes are bound to happen. That's just science, it's a fact. Now, here's the thing — every single system in the global climate is connected, they're all working together, for better or for worse. So when you add heat energy into that mix, it's gonna cause the whole global climate to change. And let me tell you, nobody knows more about change than me, believe me.

Climate change is a pressing global issue that has become more urgent in recent times. Its effects, such as rising sea levels, increased natural disasters, and altered weather patterns, are already being experienced worldwide. Tackling this problem may seem overwhelming, but making simple lifestyle changes can significantly help. For instance, cutting down on single-use plastics, opting for public transportation or carpooling instead of driving solo, and lowering energy consumption at home by switching off lights and devices when not needed can all positively affect the environment. By adopting these small adjustments, we can lessen our carbon footprint and contribute to a healthier planet for future generations.

Passage for question generation: (> 50 characters)

Climate change is a critical global issue that affects us all. However, by making small changes in our daily lives, we can contribute to solving this problem. For instance, we can decrease our carbon footprint by using alternative transportation methods like walking, biking, or public transit. Additionally, we can conserve energy by turning off lights and devices when not needed, using energy-efficient appliances, and adjusting thermostats. Furthermore, we can minimize waste by recycling, composting, and choosing reusable products over disposable ones. By adopting these simple habits, we can all play a part in combating climate change and preserving our planet for future generations.

What is the main idea of the text?

- ① The benefits of alternative transportation methods for reducing carbon footprint.
- ② How to conserve energy by using energy-efficient appliances and adjusting thermostats.
- ③ Ways to minimize waste through recycling, composting, and reusable products.
- ④ Small changes in daily habits can combat climate change.
- ⑤ Climate change is a critical global issue that affects us all.

Answer: ④ Small changes in daily habits can combat climate change.

Explanation: The correct option accurately summarizes the main point conveyed in the text - that making small changes in our daily lives can contribute to solving climate change. The wrong options are either too specific (benefits of alternative transportation methods), only cover part of what was mentioned (conserving energy or minimizing waste) or simply restate information provided within the text itself without offering any additional insight.

Russia, following talks with Vladimir Putin over a suspected arms deal.

The pair met on Wednesday at the Vostochny space centre after Mr Kim arrived in his private armoured train.

Mr Putin later said they discussed "possibilities" for military cooperation, and indicated he would help Pyongyang develop satellites.

The US says Moscow is attempting to buy weapons to support its war on Ukraine.

It has warned that any help Moscow gives to Pyongyang's satellite programme would violate UN Security Council resolutions.

Mr Putin has also accepted an invitation from Mr Kim to visit North Korea. Few heads of state have visited the closed off state.

Wednesday's meeting between the two sanctioned regimes, which included senior officials from both sides, took place at a time when tensions between the West are at an all-time low.

Mr Kim was warmly received by Mr Putin after travelling to Russia's far east. Russian state media footage showed the two leaders as they shook hands, before Mr Putin personally escorted Mr Kim to the space centre.

Vladimir Putin says military cooperation with Kim Jong Un a possibility - BBC News

Original Article

Kim Jong Un, the leader of North Korea, is currently visiting Russia. He's there to talk with Russia's leader, Vladimir Putin, about a possible deal involving weapons. They met on Wednesday at a place called the Vostochny space centre. Kim Jong Un got there on his own private train that's armored, which means it's protected against attacks.

Putin said that they talked about ways they could work together on military stuff. He also hinted that he might help North Korea develop satellites. The United States isn't happy about this. They think Russia is trying to buy weapons to help in their fight against Ukraine. They've also warned that if Russia helps North Korea with their satellite program, it would be breaking rules set by the United Nations Security Council.
